Participants are required to compete over 6-7 hours in teams of 2, possibly 3, to search out clues at significant venues which could be either easy or difficult, but always challenging.

At these sights participants are required to perform quirky activities and to have photographic proof of successful completion (that's where a digital camera comes in). Immediately a new clue is available and the participants have to decide on their strategy for the next segment. You may travel by foot, bike, car, boat, train, helicopter or even plane. So the day continues until its conclusion. Will it be a photo finish?
